The spread of disinformation has raised global concerns, posing many challenges to democratic orders. On this matter, public and private actors around the world have provided different answers to address this challenge. From the launch of guidelines to the criminalisation of false content, these approaches underline the tension between protecting free speech and limiting the spread of disinformation. This book provides a comparative constitutional analysis of the relationship between freedom of speech and disinformation. By examining reports which focus on Belgium, Canada, Croatia, the European Union, Finland, France, Germany, Hungary, Italy, Japan, Macao SAR, Romania, Türkiye, the United Kingdom, the United States of America and Vietnam, this book analyses the constitutional challenges of balancing freedom of speech and falsehood, and the approaches adopted to deal with the spread of disinformation.

With a General Report by Oreste Pollicino (University of Bocconi, Italy) and Special Reports by Giuseppe B. Abbamonte (European Commission), Elke Cloots (University of Antwerp, Belgium), Peter Coe (University of Birmingham, United Kingdom), Nicolae-Dragoş Costescu (University of Bucharest, Romania), Tat Dung Dang (Hochiminh City University of Law, Vietnam), Paula Gori (European University Institute), Leslie Gielow Jacobs (University of the Pacific, United States), Sarah Lambrecht (Constitutional Court of Belgium; University of Antwerp, Belgium), Elena Lazăr (University of Bucharest, Romania), Li Yi (University of Macau, Macao (China)), Michela Manetti (University of Siena, Italy), Eijiro Mizutani (Kansai University, Japan), Erdem Ilker Mutlu (Hacettepe University, Türkiye), Riku Neuvonen (Tampere University, Finland), Rostam J.
